At only 15 years old, this young band from Southampton have been setting the local music scene on fire. In recent months they have performed a string of great live shows, notably at The Joiners which has hosted such bands as Oasis, Radiohead and Green Day. In addition, BlindVision have also played at venues such as St Mary's Stadium in support of Southampton FC, and they have been part of the 2009 Eastleigh Music Festival.

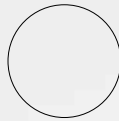

Earlier this year, BlindVision stepped up from the local scene to broadcast their music globally. They were featured as the 'House-Band' on BBC Radio 1's Switch Show with Annie Mac & Nick Grimshaw. One of their own tracks was played to millions of listeners, along with the jingle composed by the band just for the show.

BlindVision have been influenced by numerous bands, most significantly The Maccabees and The Killers.

When asked what type of music they make, the band describe themselves as an alternative pop, indie, rock band, although their own music spans a range of genres.

BlindVision have been writing and performing their own music for nearly 3 years and just keep getting better!
